

Thus, Hon^{ble} Sir, have I presented to you a report of some of those papers of state that ^{are} hidden in that Royall Depository, called the Paper Office, which place would be rendered more serviceable for the public, ^{both} the quicker finding out of useful papers, as ~~also~~ also for the making of more room for other papers of state to be layd up there in time to come. If all the Ruff ~~papers~~ ^{where} pickt out, and used as Hereticks were in Queen Maries dayes.

Brydall, John.

Report on the State Papers in the Paper Office, 1691.

V.b.1, f. 8r.