

ous maners, and men of the church to attend their diuine seruice according to their vocations.

He caused to be slaine sundrie thanes, as of Cathnes, Sutherland, Stranauerne, and Kos, because through them and their seditious attempts, much trouble dailie rose in the realme. He appeased the troublesome state of Galloway, and slue one Mackgill a tyrant, who had manie yeares before passed nothing of the regall authoritie or power. To be bryefe, such were the worthe doings and princelie acts of this Mackbeth in the administration of the realme, that if he had attained therevnto by rightfull means, and continued in vprightnesse of iustice as he began, till the end of his reigne, he might well haue bene numbred amongst the most noble princes that anie where had reigned. He made manie holesome laws and statutes for the publike weale of his subiects.

Justice intirested without respect of persons.

Lawes made by king Makbeth set foorth according to Hector Boetius.

H that is within orders of the church, shall not be compelled to answer before a temporall iudge, but be remitted to his ordinarie.

Liberties of them that haue taken orders.

The tenth part of all fruits that increase on the ground, shall be giuen to the church, that God may be worshipped with oblations and prayers.

Tithes to be paid to the church.

He that continueth obstinatlie in the curse of the church by the space of one
D. ii. whole

Persons so cursed.